

a) Argue whether or not this monument building is a) largely a sign of servitude, homage, or humility to the gods, b) a self-center cultural ego-reinforcing method that their culture is supreme, or c) hey man, it's just a

the US what
an example
such a monument?

b) Why is it the humans at the individual level or the tribal/cultural level are generally so positive they know the truth that any other ideas or cultures that don't embrace that truth are easily rejected or characterized as inferior.

Manifest this time as most groups choose to ignore this exercise.

--fear

--we are raised not to reject the truth

--We have a sort of collective close mindedness, in fact a collective truth enables large groups to come together; for example, religion.

-- People think the truth is what they've been taught for generations, people tend to fear the unknown, or the idea that the truth they know is a lie, that's why they tend to not stray from the status quo.

The Tyranny of Niceness

The Instruction Set Generation

